

ARIZONA HISTORICAL SOCIETY BOARD MEMBER

Kelly Corsette grew up in Phoenix as part of a family that has been in Arizona for four generations. He has served on the Central Arizona Chapter Board of the Arizona Historical Society since 2012, including the past two years as chapter board president. He was appointed to the state board of directors by Governor Ducey in 2016.

He currently serves as the City of Scottsdale's communications and public affairs director where he oversees media relations, citizen and employee communications, web content and social media programs, government cable television and video production operations.

Prior to Scottsdale, Kelly worked for 12 years developing the communication programs for the City of Peoria. Before entering municipal service, he served five years as a Surface Warfare Officer in the United States Navy. He holds a bachelor's degree in Video Production from the University of Arizona, and a master's degree in Communications Studies from Arizona State University.

Outside of work, he enjoys mountain biking on the trails near his northwest Phoenix home and coaching his son's youth ice hockey teams.
