Join us as Scott Einberger shares with us the story of Stewart Udall!

One of the key players of America's modern environmental movement, Stewart Udall served as U.S. Secretary of the Interior under presidents JFK and LBJ. An Arizona native and progressive Mormon, Udall ushered in unprecedented expansion to the National Park System and National Wildlife Refuge System in the 1960s. This and other legislation he championed continues to benefit Phoenix and the Grand Canyon State to this day.

Scott Einberger is an independent environmental historian based in Washington, DC.
