Journal of Arizona History
Special Issue:
“Arizona’s Environmental History”
Guest Editor: Char Miller (Pomona College)

The study of environmental history is critically important in the twenty-first century. Many aspects of Arizona environmental history have yet to be thoroughly examined, and there are a number of new avenues that scholars can explore. The Journal of Arizona History invites proposals for article manuscripts for a special issue on Arizona environmental history, to be published in 2024.

We would welcome proposals for scholarly articles about any aspect of environmental history in Arizona. Potential topics might include: water, energy, indigeneity, environmental justice, urban nature, open space, and a host of other potential topics. Manuscripts may employ a broad range of methodologies.

The Journal of Arizona History is a peer-reviewed, quarterly journal that publishes scholarly articles examining the history of Arizona. It is published in both print form and electronically on Project MUSE. Back issues are also archived on JSTOR.

Comparative and/or regional studies are welcomed. If you are researching a topic relates to the broad field of environmental history but are unsure if it is relevant for this special issue, please contact the editorial staff at the address below.

Proposals of no more than 500 words should be submitted by August 1, 2022.

Electronic submissions are preferred. Authors should submit proposals to:
